Munich Film Festival

Munich International Film Festival, Germany's biggest summer film festival successfully concluded its 34th edition this year. Starting from June 23 to 2 July, 2016, the festival saw participation of over 65000 delegates including 600 members of the press and 2500 industry professionals from all over the world. This year the festival included over 207 premiers from 62 countries, brimming with passion, romance and violence. The movies which garnered highest honors at the Munich fest included Asghar Farhadi's Iranian drama The Salesman which won the ARRI/Osram Award; All Three of Us, won Munich's audience award and Dinky Slinky, the first feature from German director Mareille Klein, picked up the Fipresci Prize and the German Cinema New Talent Award for best screenplay. Another first-time director, France's Houda Benyamina, won the Cinevision Award for best international newcomer in Munich for her debut Divines. The festival also saw movies from Nepal, Venezuela, Vanuatu, Caribbean Columbia, Montenegro, Mali, Cambodia, Bulgaria and Iraq, which were once considered as blank spots on the world moviemaking map.

The 10 day festival acted as a social meeting platform for movie theatres to come together with film makers who share similar passion and love for cinema and dare to toy with the subjects they have in hand to truly move their audiences.
